Market commentary

Following the sizeable declines in October, a degree of stability returned to markets in November. Global equities posted modest gains but not without some considerable volatility during the month. In Sterling terms, emerging market equities returned 4.1%, outperforming the 1.1% gain in developed markets. Oil notably underperformed, as concerns of a global oversupply led to a sharp reversal from four-year highs in early October. Brent Crude declined 22.2%, ending the month at $58.7 per barrel. US equities returned 2.0%, boosted early in the month by the US Midterm election result, and climbed higher at the end of the month following the Federal Reserve Chairman Powell declaring US interest rates were 'just below neutral'. Asia Pacific ex Japan equities posted the strongest returns, advancing 4.5%, amid optimism over a more gradual pace of interest rate hikes in the US and a sharp fall in the price of crude oil boosting net oil importers. UK equities performed poorly, declining 1.5% with Brexit-related uncertainties continuing to dampen sentiment. European equities posted negative returns, declining 0.5%, weighed down by concerns over economic growth and the Italian 2019 budget proposal. In fixed income, UK Gilts fell 1.3% while US Treasuries returned 0.9%. Notably, at the end of the month the 10-year US Treasury yield fell below 3% following the Federal Reserve Chairman Powell's dovish leading comments.
